Certificate of analysis/conformity to established specifications is limited to testing by Lhoist North America at the place and time of initial production using the accepted test methods shown in Section 1.0 and other standard certified testing procedures as required. Representative sampling is a statistically accepted methodology used in the evaluation of Lhoist North America's finished products. This procedure does allow for some inherent variability within the product being sampled. This variability should be considered when interpreting and/or comparing this unique data to any other unique data. Post-shipment testing is vulnerable to settling, segregation and/or decrepitation, and may result in non-homogenous sampling error(s). None of the information contained in this document constitutes a warranty, expressed and/or implied. Lhoist North America specifically disclaims any warranty of fitness or suitability for a particular purpose. All products should be considered and/or applied according to user's best judgment. PURCHASE OF PRODUCT SHOWN ON THIS DOCUMENT SIGNIFIES BUYER'S AGREEMENT THAT LHOIST NORTH AMERICA IS RESPONSIBLE ONLY FOR REPLACEMENT OF DEFECTIVE PRODUCT AND SHALL NOT IN ANY EVENT BE HELD LIABLE FOR ANY SPECIAL, INDIRECT, AND/OR CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGE.
